

Learning.....Life Poem Where I Stand

นำเสนอเมื่อ : 14 ต.ค. 2551

Anytime target="_blank" href="http://www.slide.com/s/3asRUxBi4T-object width="425" height="344">SxnGDqZdLgdgenaGH.jpg" border="0" alt="ฟรี!

Life Poem

© By Taj-domayn C. Thompson Shine Your Halo

You speak of your god in words of devotion

Yet in your heart unholy emotions

Shining your halo so it blinds our eyes

I am on to you now it's just a disguise

Words sweet as honey drip from your lips

Evil and wicked the sinker of ships

Block out the sun, pluck stars from the sky

Faking the tears that you always cry

Speaking of love like it is your friend

At last, I just can't comprehend

Love is forgiving and just letting go

Don't polish the pain so it's sure to glow

What do you get from the wars that you wage?

An actor or actress on life's daily stage

However, just remember in the final play

Your deeds and your thoughts will surely betray

Here I stand,

Until the time

Was it a crime to see what cannot be touched

Hear voices speak words that can't be undone

Was it my fault I was invincible

To the naked eye, I am invisible

I cannot be seen

Because no one wants to see me

I am different soul drifts aimlessly in times of hopelessness.

It searches tirelessly for meaning and truth ...

Yet finds no direction.

My heart bleeds quietly in times of loneliness.

It yearns to find warmth and happiness ...

Yet it somehow eludes me.

My eyes seek out visions in times of want.

They gaze endlessly through the blackness that envelops them ...

Yet they cannot see the light.

My ears listen earnestly in times of silence.

They search for familiar sounds to comfort and console ...

Yet they cannot penetrate the darkness that surrounds me.

My arms reach out frantically in times of despair.

They seek strength and compassion to enfold me ...

Yet they find nothing substantial to enwrap.

My mind cries out desperately in times of solitude.

It poses intense questions that demand answers ...

Yet there are none to be found.

Different from the rest of them

So they ignore me

But I don't ignore them

No one is friendly

Why were they so blind

Because I am not them

I am only mine

I am different

But I can see

But they can't see me

I watch them fall

Divided they fall

Together they die

But here I stand

Until the end of time

Was it a crime that I was unique

Original to the human mind

I was invisible to their standards

Invisible to their lies

But as they kneel to beg

I watch them beg

But here I stand until the end of time

Was it a crime for me to live my life

A crime for wanting to survive

No one would answer

So I will wait until the end of time